ROOSEVELT SHOT

Would-be Murderer Fails in His Attempt to Kill

Col. Theodore Roosevelt was shot in Milwaukee last Monday night on his way to make a speech. The assailant takes deliberate aim and sends bullet crashing into the former president's right side just below the nipple.

The would-be murderer gives the name of John Schrenk and New York as his residence. He is a laundryman and left his home about one month ago. The man had evidently been in Nashville, Tenn., recently, for in his pocket was found a copy of Col. Roosevelt's itinerary written on a menu card of the Bismarck hotel in Nashville.

As Col. Roosevelt stepped into an automobile to go to the auditorium, where he was to make a speech, the shot was fired. The shooter was caught at once and unarmed. He attempted to shoot the second time. In opposition to the advice of his physician the determined presidential candidate went on to his speaking place and delivered a speech. The wound was not a serious one, being pronounced superficial by his doctor. The bullet was imbedded in the muscular tissue and did not reach the lungs. The colonel was carried to Chicago to be treated.

At last accounts Mr. Roosevelt was doing well and will likely be out again in a few weeks.

I. T. S. Defeated

The I. T. S. played the second game of the season Monday afternoon against Waverly high school. The visitors scored the only points of the game on a pretty run early in the third quarter. Huntingdon was heavily outweighed, but had a little better of the first period of play. In the second a bad fumble gave Waverly an opportunity and forced the fighting hard, but lost the ball three times close to the line. After the touchdown neither team could gain consistently and the game resolved itself into a punting duel, in which Edwards got more distance, but Waverly excelled in running the ball back.

WALTERS-EASON

A Former Huntingdon Lady Married Last Week

Mrs. Joella Eason was married Thursday of last week at Gleason to William W. Walters, of Weakley county. The marriage was witnessed by a few special friends. We did not learn who said the ceremony.

The bride is a lady well-known to Huntingdon and Carroll county people, among whom she has a host of friends. She formerly lived in Huntingdon and everybody here is her friend and well-wisher. She is a most excellent lady. The groom is an aged gentleman, but one of Weakley county's best citizens. He is well-to-do, having been a very successful farmer, having recently purchased an elegant home in Gleason, where they will reside after November 1.

Foss D. Moore

A special from Milan says: Foss D. Moore, 72, died at his home on Collins street, Saturday, after a continued illness of Bright's disease. Mr. Moore was one of the best citizens of the town, was prominent in business affairs, being freight agent for the Illinois Central Railroad company here for about thirty years.

Hopewell Presbytery

Hopewell Presbytery convened in regular session October 3, 1912, with Hopewell church in Weakley county, six miles west of Sharon. The opening sermon was preached by the retiring moderator, L. E. McCoy. Roll call showed twenty-three churches represented, with seventeen ordained ministers.

Rev. B. F. Guinn was chosen moderator. One young man was ordained to the full work of the ministry. The power of the holy ghost was felt in every meeting.

The women's board of missions conducted a splendid program. They took a collection for missions which amounted to $53.21.

All preachers and ministers were interested in their work.

The Democrat—52 weeks, $1.

FRIDAY'S SPEAKING

A Large Crowd Heard the Governor and McCarn

Governor Ben W. Hooper and Gen. Jeff McCarn spoke to a fine audience at the court house last Friday. The circuit court room was crowded to its capacity. Many democrats and independents were present. A large number of ladies were also in attendance. The speaking created no little interest, the people seemed anxious to hear and the very best of attention was given the speakers. The McLeMoresville Concert Band furnished music for the occasion.

The governor reached Huntingdon about 11:30 from Lexington, where he spoke the day before, being accompanied by Gen. Jeff McCarn, William Overall and Jesse S. Cottrell. The governor and his party were met at the train by a committee of prominent citizens and accompanied to the home of Dr. J. H. McCall, where a lunch in seven courses was served the governor and his party and the reception committee.

This was followed by a reception at the home of Dr. McCall, in which Mrs. McCall assisted the doctor in receiving. The dining-room and parlor were beautifully decorated in American colors, with potted flowers and evergreen used with artistic effect.

Following the reception the party was met by carriages and driven to the court house, headed by the McLeMoresville band. The court house was completely crowded when the speakers arrived and the meeting was presided over by Mr. P. W. Maddox, who presented E. T. Sparks, a candidate for the legislature, who referred to the governor as a man who had pleased every person who favored law-enforcement and the better things in public life and whose administration of the affairs of the state entitled him and insured his re-election.

The governor was generously applauded. He began by saying that everywhere he had been he had been greeted by great crowds, and he found that the people were standing by him in this contest just as they did two years ago.

His speech was practically the same as delivered at other places, and was delivered in such an honest and convincing way as to win him friends and hold those he had before.

At the conclusion of his speech the governor was presented with a handsome bouquet of flowers by Miss Jessie Hubbard, representing the local W. C. T. U.

The second speaker was Gen. Jeff McCarn, who said he believed in law-enforcement. He paid a great tribute to the late Senator Carmack, and the mention of Mr. Carmack's name brought a prolonged applause. He said that Patterson knew in advance of the killing of Carmack, and that Mr. Patterson had injected this matter into the campaign and that he was attorney-general of Davidson county at the time and that he intended telling the truth about the matter. He urged the voters to go to the polls and vote for men and measures that would rid Tennessee of her saloons and low dives. He said Gov. Patterson was in charge of the machinery of the regular democrats in the state, and was dictating their policies. He appealed to the people to vote for men who would not vote for Patterson to occupy the chair of the late lamented Carmack, said the state could not afford that occurrence. Gen. McCarn's speech was well received.

Teachers' Meeting

The Carroll county teachers will hold their next meeting at Huntingdon on Saturday, November 2. Following is the program:

1. Devotional exercises, Rev. Yates Moore.

2. Primary plans for first grade, Misses Effie Chambers, Hattie Wright and Bessie Hillsman.

3. Primary plans for second grade, Misses Rebecca Bayer and Jennie Lee Evans.

4. Dinmore's "The Training of Children," first and second chapters.

5. School gardening, Misses Eufala and Wylia Gaskins.

6. Better school buildings for Carroll county, Prof. E. H. Edwards.

7. The great white plague, how teachers are to combat it, Prof. Garrett, of Hollow Rock, and Prof. Joe Murphy.

Fellow teachers, I appeal to you to be present at this meeting, if you possibly can; for our success as teachers and the success of our pupils depend upon the interest we take in the work we are doing. To those on the program, you are urged to do your best.

A fellow teacher in another county remarked, to your chairman a few days ago, that the teachers' meetings of Carroll county are more interesting than those of that county. Why is that so? It is because the teachers make it so. Now, if you are one that has been faithful to the cause, don't you feel proud? Be not satisfied with present success, but strive to do better every day. Come to the meeting with something good, expecting to renew your enthusiasm and to return with the determination of returning to your winter work to make it the best term of all your teaching.

Some teachers have suggested local teachers' meetings be held over the county for the benefit of teachers in the extreme portions of the county. If you want a meeting at your place make your wants known. We wish to do what is best for the success of the cause. Most respectfully,

W. J. Forrester, Chairman.

STOCK BARN BURNED

N. D. Marshall, Near Trezevant, Suffers Heavy Loss

Fire destroyed the large stock and feed barn of N. D. Marshall, near Trezevant, last Sunday night. The origin of the fire is not known, but it is believed to have been the work of an incendiary. It seems to have been set in several different places. It was a new barn, having been built this summer.

Together with the barn were destroyed, three head of horses and mules, a cow, hay, corn and farm tools, making a total loss of over $2,500. We understand Mr. Marshall had $600 insurance.

Immediately after the fire bloodhounds were secured and an effort made to trail the miscreants, but the dogs failed to accomplish any good, and Mr. Marshall is left without any clue. A neighbor, T. T. Hart, lost his large barn and some fine stock last spring by fire.

Mrs. A. H. Jones

The Democrat failed last week to learn of the death of Mrs. A. H. Jones, which occurred on Wednesday, afternoon, October 9, at the home of her father, Zack Fry, in the Sixth district. The family live near Trezevant, but Mrs. Jones had gone to her parents on a visit and was taken sick while there, and death ensued. She was a Seventh Day Adventist and a most excellent christian woman. She is survived by her husband and four children and a host of friends and relatives. The burial occurred on Thursday, after appropriate funeral and burial services.

Goes to Memphis

Vernon T. Grizzard, of Nashville, state secretary of the Y. M. C. A., spent last Saturday in Huntingdon mixing with friends and looking after some business matters. Mr. Grizzard has recently been elected general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. at Memphis to take the place of B. G. Alexander, who goes to Norfolk, Va. Mr. Grizzard says this is a very tempting offer and that he will very likely accept it and move to the Bluff City. Mr. Grizzard was reared in Huntingdon, has many friends here who are glad to note the splendid success he is meeting with in his chosen field of work.

Meet at Murfreesboro

The 1912 meeting of the Tennessee Baptist State convention will be held in Murfreesboro, November 13-15. This is one month later than the usual time of meeting. Murfreesboro is making big preparations to entertain the host of Baptists that will be in attendance. They propose to make the stay of those who attend both pleasant and profitable, and they are anxious to have a large crowd. If you are going notify R. W. Hale, Murfreesboro, who will assign you a home.

Hon. P. W. Maddox spoke in Lavinia last Saturday afternoon and that night at Atwood. He says he had very fair crowds. He spoke in the interest of Roosevelt, Hooper and Sparks.

TRAGEDY NEAR M'KENZIE

J. D. Wallace Kills His Brother-in-law, Frank Adams, Saturday

Last Saturday evening, just after sundown, J. D. Wallace shot and killed his brother-in-law, Frank Adams, on the public road, three miles west of McKenzie. Wallace used a revolver, shooting five times, one of the bullets striking Adams in the heart, killing him instantly. Wallace is a farmer about 38 years old and very popular. Adams was about 32 and dissipated. The tragedy is said to be the result of an old grudge, and Wallace claims self-defense.

Adams is alleged to have tried to kill himself several times and to have told a business man of McKenzie that he was tired of living and that he was going to use a knife on someone he knew would shoot him.

It is said that several months ago he went to the home of Wallace and drove him away with a shotgun. Later Wallace had him arrested, and it is alleged that Adams said he would "get even" with Wallace. It is also alleged that Adams told acquaintances Saturday that he intended to "lay for" Wallace on the road that Wallace had to travel to reach home, and "get him." Wallace was warned of these reports. The two met on the road, a quarrel ensued, and it is said that Adams started toward Wallace with a drawn knife, when Wallace opened fire.

Following the shooting, Wallace telephoned to McKenzie, reported the killing, came to town and surrendered to the authorities. It is said that Adams' father, who is Wallace's father-in-law, has stated that he will not prosecute Wallace.

Adams is well-known here, having been in the courts here several times for small law violations.

COMMUNITY BREEDING

It Pays for Neighborhoods to Improve Their Stock

Following is an extract from a letter on community breeding sent out by Capt. T. F. Peck:

Every farmer should be ambitious and broad-minded enough to desire for his own section of country an improvement in its live stock. While bringing this about may be difficult for the individual, it may easily be accomplished by co-operation among the farmers of a community.

No improvement in the dairy herd can be had from the use of the scrub sire, and to most dairymen the price of the pure-bred sire is prohibitive. Here is where the plan of community breeding can be helped out of the trouble.

It would be hard to overestimate the value resulting from the use of pure bred dairy sire. If the sire is responsible for only an additional 40 pounds of butter fat, or 1,000 pounds of milk per cow, the net increase from a herd of 20 cows will be nearly $200 per year. Thus, if three or four herds are concerned, the price of the first-class sire is far more than repaid the first year. The scrub bull will not help the individual in any community to such an extra income. The aim should be at least 300 pounds of butter per cow annually. Why do so many of our dairymen remain content with 200 pounds or only 150 pounds?

A writer in the Pacific Rural Press says on the subject: "Co-operation in this matter should appeal to every dairymen. We all need the help of our fellowmen. It is difficult, tedious and expensive for an individual to build up a name and reputation as a breeder. The organization of several men carries more weight and more power to accomplish an end than the efforts of several men working independently. A permanent organization or dairymen in any district with a fixed resolve to eliminate every scrub bull and to support community breeding will do untold good."

"Co-operative work will assist in arresting and stamping out diseases, will protect all members in purchasing as well as in selling stock, and will quickly bring prosperity to the district. It naturally goes hand in hand with the present excellent cow-testing work, and any creamery can easily be made the center for organization."

Mrs. J. F. Neeley and children returned from Chattanooga Monday evening. They were accompanied home by Mrs. Neeley's mother, Mrs. Mattie Johnson.
